

THANKSGIVING BLESSINGS

Dear friends,

Thanksgiving this year will undoubtedly be a rather “un-celebratory” occasion for many of you. Celebrations of special occasions like birthdays, graduations, and anniversaries, have all been impacted by restrictions during this pandemic. Here we are at Thanksgiving which Canadians tend to celebrate in style with family and friends. This year, many of us are unable to keep our cherished traditions. It has been such a stressful year, especially for those who are grieving the loss of loved ones. A celebration would certainly lift everyone’s spirits. Even though it may be hard to feel thankful this year, let us count our blessings and be grateful for the good we have received. During these stressful times, may we pause this weekend to reflect on all that is good in our lives and give thanks for the many blessings that are ours, even during this pandemic.

We, the Missionary Sisters of the Precious Blood of the North American Province, continue to hold you in prayer. We wish you, and your families, a graced and abundantly blessed Thanksgiving weekend.

be Thankful for.
